If recent drastic price fluctuations are creating decision making problems for you, every is normal.

Last Thursday feeder pigs at Farmville topped out at $1.14 a pound. Hogs averaged just over $56 per cwt last week compared with $28 per cwt last year. Choice and fancy feeders brought $68 compared with $49 a year earlier. Good grade slaughter steers went for $38 compared to $33 last year. Number 2 yellow corn went over $3 a bushel on some Virginia markets last week. Barley went as high as $2 a bushel; number 2 wheat was selling for more than $3 at most Virginia markets.

Certainly we are in a period of uncertainties with feed cost up and rising, labor costs are surely to go up, interest rates continuing to rise, farm machinery will follow this trend and producers face the problem of scarities of critical supplies. Reports from tobacco growing areas south of here indicate that 5 ply twine for tobacco tiers is almost impossible to obtain.

Producers need to keep one thing in proper perspective - cost of inputs. Never has there been a time when the opportunity to turn a profit was more nearly geared to a daily analysis of alternatives than now. In very simple terms "watch your step."

Better take a close look at adding urea to corn silage. Here's what it means based on today's protein prices. When urea is added at the rate of 10 pounds per ton of 35% dry matter silage, the urea will add 28 pounds of protein per ton which increases the protein 1.5%. This increase is worth over $7.00 at a cost of about 60c for the urea.

An additional saving is made because the protein in the concentrate mix, fed dairy animals, can be reduced as much as 7%.

Have you observed the small wasp (black with a yellow spot on the abdomen) flying over the lawn. They are seeking out grubs to deposit their eggs. The wasps feed on and kill the grub. This is a good insect to have around.

We're getting calls about logworms on scale-type evergreens. Sevin does a good job.

Food fads have been in existance a long time. Historically, New York has been a white egg market and Boston a brown egg market. I had assumed that probably this had changed but in a super market at St. Andrews, New Brunswick I noticed that brown eggs of the same size and grade were priced 2c a dozen higher.

PREPARE FOR MARKET HOG SHOW

Several Appomattox 4-H and FFA members have been busy preparing for the Piedmont Jr. Market Hog Show and Sale to be held this Thursday, August 9 at the Farmville Livestock. The show and sale, held each year at this time, provided 4-H and FFA members an opportunity to show and demonstrate their animals in the Market Hog project.

The show and sale is the last stop in many months of preparation and practice. Not only does the animal need to be correctly fed and cared for, but the members must also be able to handle his or her animal in the show ring.

Animals are graded at the market by a Virginia Department of Agriculture grader and weighed before being readied for the show ring. Animals compete according to grades and weight classes. prize money for the show is provided by Kinzs' Supermarkets.

Pictures from the top are 4-H'ers Robert Dyess, Barry Dunbar, and Mary Dyess reading their animals for the Jr. Market Hog Show and Sale.

Officers for the coming year are: David Nash, president; Ronnie Williamson, vice-president; Donald Nash, Secretary; Fred Jones, Asst. Unusual Snake Display

Zandra Elder of Appomattox is shown above with a rather unusual display of snakes. On Sunday, August 5, her brother, Benny Crain, killed a water snake (45" long) that he mounted on a slab of wood. Before mounting the snake skin, Benny and his father, W. B. Crain, opened the snake in order to remove her babies. All 54 baby snakes died just after release from the mother and are mounted on the wood held by Zandra.

The water snake was killed in a duck house on a farm pond. Just a week before they killed a copperhead snake in the same place. The copperhead had 25 babies inside her but they were destroyed immediately as they are extremely poisonous even at birth.

Grows Large Cantaloupe

He stopped by for a picture before taking the cantaloupe to his good friend, Dr. C. G. O'Brien.

Percy says, "I stole the fertilizer from around the silo on the Carter Martin farm."
